

Strategy

The Galileo - Biotech Innovation Fund is a long-only equity fund offering focused access to companies in the field of genome editing. Representing the next step in the evolution of medical technology, genome editing holds the potential cure for a variety of rare diseases but also offers a novel approach to more common conditions with established treatments. Further applications range from livestock to crop science. The fund offers a diversified, thematic approach since the success probability of a single company or treatment in genome editing is heavily error prone and can lead to missed opportunities and cluster risks. While there is ample runway to expand revenue and profits, innovation leaders with successful products may become takeover targets for large pharma and biotech companies. Main investment criteria are stock liquidity, governance aspects and the health of the balance sheet. The actively managed fund invests at least 51% in Biotech companies and is managed independently of a benchmark.
